

Planning and Delivering a Skills-based, Whole School, English Curriculum

The Whole-School English approach to building a broad curriculum.

- Are you concerned about the complexities of providing a broad and balanced curriculum at the same time as driving up the standards in core subjects?
- Are you aware of how successful schools apply core subject skills across the curriculum?
- Does Ofsted's focus on the curriculum add to the pressure?

Mark McCaughan will guide you through this complex area by sharing his resources and wide experience.

This training will bring together subject teams and support them to identify the areas of literacy which should be consistent across the whole school and which areas are most relevant to improving standards in their specific subject area.

The training will help you focus on these requirements, and their potential to drive up whole-school standards:

spelling - grammar - reading - writing - thinking - talking - listening

Throughout, there will be a focus on the specific requirements of each subject.
